As I wrap up my 26-year directing career at Vincent Massey, I find myself deeply grateful for the students, memories, and moments that have shaped my time leading 25 productions. I have been incredibly fortunate to work alongside such talented students, dedicated colleagues, and supportive community members as we took on the enormous challenge and joy of bringing shows to life year after year.

As I pass on the tradition that began with David Wilson, Margaret Lysenko, Joan Mackay, and so many others who helped build this program, I feel blessed to have been part of more than a thousand students' high school journeys. Together, we've shared hard work, laughter, tears, and unforgettable joy.

I will truly miss the magnitude of this experience-the magic of creating something bigger than ourselves. I am profoundly thankful for the opportunity to have spent these years celebrating the power of theatre with the most wonderful, supportive people.

You can still find me teaching at Vincent Massey as I begin the next chapter of my story and take on a Master's program. Here's to new beginnings-and to the lasting power of story-telling and community through theatre.
